"Now you are the body of Christ and individually members of it." — 1 Corinthians 12:27

There are some people whose ministry is easy to see. They stand in front. They preach, teach, sing, lead, or serve in ways that naturally draw our attention. And then there are people whose ministry is woven so deeply into the life of a congregation that it can be difficult to name all the places their fingerprints remain. For 27 years, Wendy has been that person for us at Our Savior's.

The Apostle Paul gives us one of my favorite images for the church when he describes us as the body of Christ. There are many members, many gifts, many functions—and every part matters. No single person is the church. Instead, God gathers all these different people and gifts together and somehow, through grace, makes us one body. For nearly three decades, Wendy has faithfully helped care for that body.

Her hands have created beautiful decorations for Vacation Bible School, prepared bulletins, made coffee, and accomplished countless tasks most of us will never know needed doing. Her voice has received members on the phone when they call in crisis or grief, it has made music with Free Spirit, and helped lead children's choirs and Christmas programs. Her creativity shows up every week in the images she carefully chooses for our bulletins and the words and visuals she prepares for our worship screens. She has helped ministries communicate, pastors prepare, families connect, children participate, and worship happen.

And through all of it, Wendy has simply been there.

Pastors have come and gone. Staff have come and gone. Families have grown, children have become adults, beloved members have died, new people have walked through our doors, ministries have begun and ended, technology has changed—and the church has continued to become something new. Through so many of those seasons, Wendy has been a steady presence and there is something deeply faithful about that. That kind of ministry reminds us that very little is ordinary when it is offered in love. Through all of these years that is what she has faithfully offered this congregation.

As Wendy prepares for retirement at the end of October, I find myself deeply grateful—not simply for everything she has done, but for the way she has been part of who we have been. Serving these years with us is a remarkable gift of time, presence, creativity, care, and faithfulness.

Wendy, you have been an important part of this body of Christ. You have helped generations of people experience Our Savior's as a place where they are welcomed, worship is prepared with care, ministry is supported, and people are known. When I came on staff as a Children's Ministry Coordinator you showed me the ropes and helped me as a mentor with Christmas programs and chaotic Wednesdays. When I was called here as the Lead Pastor, you once again received me with support and guidance, teaching me how others have navigated a call in this place. You always offered perfect perspective in questions and were always one step ahead of me. Thank you for your faithfulness and heart.

On behalf of this congregation, and personally as one of the many pastors who has had the privilege of serving alongside you, thank you for showing up, sharing your gifts, caring about the details, and loving this congregation. The body of Christ is better because your gifts have been part of it.

In gratitude and Christian love,
Pastor Kira

ROOTED IN GOD'S LOVE. GATHERED AS CHRIST'S COMMUNITY. SPRINGING INTO JOYFUL DISCIPLESHIP.

Learning the Rhythms of a Thriving Life

As we move into October, Thriv'era is beginning to move from an idea we have been talking about into a way of life we can practice together. That distinction matters. Thriv'era is not simply a program, a book, or a small-group experience. It is an invitation to pay attention to who we are, how we are being formed, and what kind of life we want to bring into the world. At the heart of Thriv'era are seven rhythms. Each has what I call a Guiding Narrative—a few sentences that name both an identity we have already been given and a way of life into which we are continually growing.

The larger narrative sounds like this:

Thriv'era challenges us to move with thoughtful purpose toward a deepened sense of identity—that we are spirited, creative, and connected people called to be present, grateful, generous, and missional with our lives—by intentionally living into a series of life rhythms that help us bring some good to each moment, something better to each day, and our best to each other as we encounter the world around us. Notice where it begins: not with what we should accomplish, but with who we are.

Who We Are

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are spirited people—alive by gift, not by striving. We thrive as spirited people by receiving each breath as grace and living awake to the Spirit who inspires and animates all life.

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are creative people—designed by grace to participate in God's ongoing making. We thrive as creative people by discovering our identity and purpose, honoring the sacred impulse to make, and cultivating wonder, imagination, and innovation for the sake of love.

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are connected people—formed for generative, life-giving relationships. We thrive as connected people by practicing intentional kindness and hospitality, and by building trust and respect that sustain community.

Spirited. Creative. Connected. These are not achievements to earn. They name something about the life God has already breathed into us. But identity naturally begins to shape practice. Who we are begins to influence how we live.

How We Live

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are people of Presence—learning to be fully alive to the gift of here and now. We thrive in the present by practicing rhythms of sabbath: creating margin, welcoming silence, listening deeply, honoring thin places when they appear, and immersing ourselves in what this moment has to teach. Presence gathers what distraction scatters, giving us richness in the ordinary, clarity in the complex, and a quiet centeredness that helps life unfold.

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are grateful people—blessed not only to receive but to be a blessing. We thrive as grateful people by practicing gratitude as a heartfelt discipline, remembering with joy and thanksgiving that all we have is gift and grace. As we gather the good, gratitude becomes steadiness—strengthening love between us and breathing hope into the rooms where life is hardest.

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are generous people—free to live open-handedly and open-heartedly. We thrive as generous people by seeking lavish interactions with the world so that the abundance of the few can transform the scarcity of the many into a feast of blessing where all have enough.

Presence teaches us to receive the moment. Gratitude teaches us to notice the gift. Generosity teaches us to open our hands. And eventually these rhythms turn us outward.

How We Are Sent

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are missional people—a sense of mission woven into our very nature, aligning us with God's healing work in the world. We thrive as missional people by joining movements that generate hope, unity, and wholeness.

This is where the rhythms lead—not away from the world, but more deeply into it. Thriving is never simply about becoming healthier, happier, or more fulfilled individuals. We are being formed for the sake of our neighbors, our communities, and God's beloved world.

Maybe that is the invitation before us this fall. Not to master seven ideas. Not to add seven more things to an already crowded life. But to practice a way of being. To become increasingly awake to the Spirit. To make room for wonder. To widen the table. To return to the present moment. To gather the good. To open our hands. To take the next faithful step.

And perhaps, over time, the seven rhythms begin to sound less like seven separate practices and more like one life:

As image-bearers of the Divine, we are Spirited, Creative, and Connected people—learning to be fully Present to the gift of here and now. We thrive as Grateful people who gather the good, as Generous people who live with open hands, and as Missional people who step off the map for the sake of love. And when these rhythms become a way of life, we discover what has been true all along: thriving isn't a finish line we reach, but a posture we practice—bringing good to each moment, something better to each day, and our best to each other as we encounter the world together.

That is the journey we are beginning together. And October seems like a very good time to keep taking the next faithful step. Thriv'era Small Groups begin on Wednesday, October 7.

I'm in it with you! Pastor Paul

Our next gathering is on

We'll be discussing
"Yesteryear"
by Caro Claire Burke

Our November selection will take us in a very different direction! Yesteryear is a thought-provoking novel about a modern-day social media influencer who has built her identity around an idealized "traditional" way of life. It raises fascinating questions about faith, identity, gender roles, motherhood, social media, nostalgia, power, and the stories we tell ourselves about the "good old days."

- 1. What stayed with you?
- 2. Where did you see yourself?
- 3. Where might God be inviting you?

A note for readers: This is an adult novel and contains strong language and mature and potentially disturbing content, including depictions of domestic and child abuse, violence, sexual content, pregnancy-related trauma, and other difficult situations. It will not be the right book for every reader, and that is okay. I chose this book because it gives us plenty to wrestle with and discuss together. As always, come ready for good conversation, different perspectives, and the opportunity to listen to one another!

TOGETHER, WE THRIVE

OUR FOUR-WEEK STEWARDSHIP JOURNEY

As we look toward 2027, we invite you to begin prayerfully considering how God is calling you to support the ministry we share at Our Savior's.

In the coming weeks, watch for Together, We Thrive, our four-week stewardship journey. Through Scripture, stories from our congregation, and weekly reflections, we'll consider what God has entrusted to us and how our generosity helps cultivate a community where people can thrive.

God gives first. We don't thrive alone. Together, we bear fruit that lasts.

For now, simply begin with prayer: What might God be calling me to give toward our shared ministry in 2027?

COUNCIL CORNER

To the Congregation of Our Saviors:

The Church Council met September 15th, and as always, had a full agenda. With this meeting, we were joined by Jill and Brooke from Lighthouse Strategic Solutions for a portion of the meeting. They walked the council through their first comprehensive Financial Packet delivered to the council for the month of August. In addition to the standard Statement of Financial Position (a non-profit's Balance Sheet) and Statement of Activity (The "Income" Statement) and very detailed analysis of the month's financial activity, they are additionally adding graphs of operating cash flow, a financial dashboard which quickly compares the last five years of offerings month by month and a Statement of Cash Flow, which for those who are familiar with it, is a UCA Cash Flow statement, showing how our cash balance is affected by the inflows and outflows of the ministries, which gives the council a quick means of looking at our financial position, and at present, we're in a strong financial position with approximately five months of operating cash on hand right now.

Of course part of why we are where we are is because we're well under our budgeted staffing and benefit expenses in being down three staff most of the year, but here too is where Lighthouse has been and will be of benefit to Our Saviors. Lighthouse had a part in bringing Laurell LaCanne, our new office coordinator, on board. They will also continue with the hiring process of new staff based on the job descriptions brought forth by the Staffing Task Force.

Another topic that led to poignant discussion was following up on this summer's conversation of the ELCA's social statements. As a continuation of this, there will be opportunities forthcoming where we, as a congregation, will revisit Our Savior's stated position in response to the ELCA's 2009 Social Statement. There will be more information to come on this.

We're back into September now, a season symbolized by change, and that's something that's been indicated this congregation has been yearning for. There are so many reasons to be excited about what's to come, and what's taking shape is a direct result of the conversations, roundtables, discussions, and gatherings that have been taken place.

Thank you, each of you, for how you help support the ministry of Our Saviors, be it through your gift of time, resources, talents or voice. We're grateful for how you give, but moreover, we're grateful for you.

In Christ's Peace,
Our Savior's Council

Staff Update

September 15, 2026

Dear Pr. Kira, Church Council and members of Our Savior's,

First of all I would like to begin by saying it has been a blessing and honor to have worked as the Office Manager at Our Savior's for the last 27 years. In that time have learned so much about my job, my faith, about myself and about the members of Our Savior's. I've learned to work through the bad times and to celebrate the good time.

I want to thank the Church Council, all the people I have worked with in the present and the past and all the people of Our Savior's for the support and care that you all have giving me these past years. I have been truly blessed.

They say all good things must come to an end and on that note I am giving you my retirement date of October 29, 2026 as my last day of work.

Blessing to you all.
