Dear friends in Christ,

One of the shortest verses in all of scripture, comes in the story of Lazarus. Jesus went to Mary and Martha's home after Lazarus' death and scripture says in John 11: 35 "Jesus began to weep." I wonder if it isn't one of the most powerful verses we get.

Surrounded by Mary and others who were grieving, Jesus cried. He knew the promises of God. He knew that death would not have the final word. And still, he wept. This text is comforting because it reminds me that even though I am a person of faith, grief doesn't need to disappear. Believing in the resurrection does not mean we won't feel the ache of someone's absence. Trusting in God's promises does not mean we won't wish for one more conversation, one more embrace, or one more ordinary day with someone we love.

The first Sunday in November is when the church makes room for remembering. On All Saints Sunday, we pause to name those who have died, give thanks for their lives, and remember that they remain held in the promises of God. But grief doesn't belong to just one Sunday, and for all who have experienced the death of someone we love, we know that our grief certainly doesn't follow the calendar.

For many, the approaching holiday season brings a complicated mixture of emotions. There may be joy in gathering around a table, and sadness because someone is no longer sitting in their familiar chair. There may be laughter as stories are shared, followed unexpectedly by tears. A favorite recipe, a familiar song, or a decoration pulled from a box can bring memories rushing back. Sometimes the hardest part of losing someone isn't simply the moment they die. It is learning how to live in a world where they are no longer physically present. It is all the ordinary moments when we reach for the phone, expect to hear their voice, or wish they could see who we've become.

Grief is not something we simply get over. It is something we learn to carry. And the weight of it changes over time. It is my prayer that as we enter this season, we might give ourselves and one another permission to remember. To speak the names of those we miss. To tell their stories, make their recipes, laugh about their quirks, and even cry when the memories feel especially close. Remembering someone does not mean we are unable to move forward, quite the contrary it means their life mattered, that their love shaped us. And even though death has changed our relationship with them, it cannot erase the ways they continue to be part of who we are.

As a congregation, we have an opportunity to be especially tender with one another during this season. We may not always know who is carrying grief into worship, who is facing a first holiday without someone they love, or whose loss from many years ago still feels particularly close. But we can make room. We can listen. We can remember alongside one another. We can resist the temptation to rush someone toward feeling better.

Perhaps that is one of the most faithful things we can do. Our Christian hope is not that death doesn't hurt, instead we cling to the promise, and hope is that death does not have the final word. The God who meets us in our tears is also the God who promises that nothing, not even death, can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus.

So, this November, as we gather around tables, light candles, share stories, and enter another holiday season, may we remember that there is room for both gratitude and grief. Room for joy and longing. Room for remembering what was, while remaining open to the life still unfolding before us. And if you find yourself missing someone especially deeply this season, I pray you will remember this: Your grief is welcome here. Your memories matter. And you do not have to carry them alone.

In Christ, Pastor Kira

Growing Together into Our Next Chapter

Dear friends at Our Savior's, grace and peace to you!

Since returning to ministry among you in June, I've been reminded what a gift it is to know a congregation across different seasons of its life. Familiar faces, new names, cherished memories, and fresh possibilities all deepen my gratitude for this community that helped form me as a pastor.

When I served Our Savior's from 1987 to 1995, we faced challenges together. In the years since, you have faced many more and risen to meet them again and again. We know something about finding our way through change, trusting God and one another while the path is still taking shape.

Now we have another opportunity to draw on that faith and courage.

Since July, these articles have moved from introducing our renewed partnership to exploring Thriv'era, inviting you into small groups, and connecting its seven rhythms with everyday life. Through it all, one question has guided us: How might the faith we share become more deeply woven into the lives we live?

Thriv'era brings together "thrive" and "era," expressing the hope that we can thrive in every season of life. Rooted in Christ, it begins with who we are: image-bearers of the Divine, spirited, creative, and connected people, called to be present, grateful, generous, and missional with our lives.

These seven rhythms connect the worship we share on a weekend with the lives we live throughout the week. They shape how we listen, how we welcome others, how we respond to hardship, and how we use what we have for our neighbors' good.

We chose to explore Thriv'era at Our Savior's because there is so much here worth nurturing, and because our next chapter will ask us to grow.

Building relationships across generations will be some of our most important work. It means listening to younger people and families, welcoming their gifts and leadership, and allowing their experiences and questions to shape our life together.

Thriv'era gives us shared practices for that work: listening with our full attention, reaching beyond familiar circles, making room for another person's ideas, and joining God's work in response to our neighbors' needs.

This will take courage. It will stretch us. We'll need to reconsider familiar habits, try things whose outcomes we cannot predict, and stay in conversation when we see things differently. Our history gives me confidence that we can meet that challenge together.

As I reflect on these months, three things stand out clearly.

First, Our Savior's is in remarkable hands with Pastor Kira Anderson's leadership. She is brilliant and capable, with leadership skills beyond her years. She listens deeply to the Spirit and to this congregation. Her generous pastoral heart makes room for people's questions, struggles, and hopes. She brings wisdom, compassion, and imagination to helping Our Savior's grow in faith and serve the wider community. This congregation has much to look forward to under her leadership.

Second, trust runs deep at Our Savior's. This congregation trusts its leadership, and its members trust one another. That trust creates room for honest questions, shared learning, and faithful steps forward—even before every detail is settled. It is a strength that will serve the congregation well in its next chapter.

Finally, there is an enormous amount of love at Our Savior's. People genuinely care for one another. That love is evident in those who have nurtured this congregation for decades and in those just beginning to call it home. It embraces people of every age and stage of life—children and youth, younger and older adults, people who come on their own, and families of every shape and size. The opportunity ahead is to deepen connections across this congregation, honoring the wisdom and faithfulness already here while welcoming fresh gifts and perspectives. Our Savior's grows stronger as each person finds a place to contribute, be known, and grow in faith.

These gifts give me confidence as we enter our next chapter. I'm grateful to be here with you, learning to bring some good to each moment, something better to each day, and our best to one another.

I'm in it with you!
Pastor Paul

2027 STEWARDSHIP CAMPAIGN

TOGETHER
We Thrive

By now, every household should have received our 2027 stewardship letter and Statement of Intent (if you haven't please let the church office know). As we look toward another year of ministry, we invite every household to prayerfully consider making a financial commitment for 2027. Every gift matters, and every household has a part in helping cultivate a community where people of all generations can thrive. We have spent the last few weeks asking "What has God entrusted to you, and what do you want to help grow?"

Together, through our generosity, we continue to bear fruit for the sake of one another and the world God loves.

Please return your 2027 Statement of Intent by November 15th, so we can plan for our 2027 Budget.

COUNCIL CORNER

The Church Council met on Tuesday, October 20th. Pastor Kira took time with us to acknowledge something that she has noticed in the life of the congregation. She recognized that we have gone through a significant season of transition. Staffing changes, leadership changes, new structures, new opportunities, and some difficult conversations along the way.

As a council we are beginning to see some of the things we've been working toward taking shape. We've welcomed new staff, strengthened financial accountability through Lighthouse Strategic Solutions, created new opportunities for ministry in programs and worship, and we are moving toward a more financially sustainable staffing structure. And we want to celebrate that with all of you!

The goal of these transitions has been transformation. To remain faithful to our calling while creating space for new generations of people to belong.

But sometimes the very systems we create to protect what we love can make it difficult for something new to grow. Over the past several years, many seeds have been planted, and we are beginning to see some of them grow. Perhaps our work right now isn't to keep digging up those seeds to see whether they're growing, but to trust what has been planted, continue tending the soil, and give new things room to take root.

We want you to know that important policies and practices have been established to strengthen accountability and oversight. Those safeguards matter to your council, Leadership, Pastors and staff!

But a healthy congregational culture doesn't change simply because new structures or staff are in place. It changes when we begin practicing different behaviors together. When we move from protecting what we've always done to discerning what is needed now.

Trust doesn't mean we stop asking questions or holding leadership accountable. It means we work together with clarity, transparency, and a shared commitment to our future.

We also took time in our visioning to discuss the ELCA's Social Statement and as part of this we will be taking a look at our own congregational response to the 2009 Social Statement. There will be opportunities for discussion as we move forward with this.

In looking forward, we are looking at preparing the budget for 2027. Our table leadership has been asked to have their budget asks in by month end, but a large part of this depends on getting pledges back and knowing where we stand. We ask that you prayerfully consider how you are able to support the ministry of Our Saviors in the year to come.

Lastly, we are excited to announce that the Council has also approved the reformation and election of an Endowment Committee. The nominating committee will be seeking potential members of this committee which will be voted in at the Annual Meeting.

In Christ's Peace,
Our Savior's Council

Planning Ahead:

A Gift of Love to Those We Love

Sunday, November 1

10:45–11:30 AM | Following Worship

Some of the most meaningful gifts we give to those we love come through conversations we aren't always comfortable having. Planning for the future, talking about death, and considering the legacy we want to leave can feel overwhelming, but we don't have to navigate these conversations alone.

Join Pastor Kira for a special gathering as Tharan Leopold, Gift Planner with the ELCA Foundation, shares how we can thoughtfully plan for the gifts God has entrusted to us, caring for our loved ones while making a lasting impact through the ministries and causes we cherish. We will also welcome Boldt Funeral Home, who will help us explore funeral pre-planning and the decisions we can make today to ease the burden on loved ones during difficult times.

This is an opportunity to ask questions, explore possibilities, and begin conversations in a welcoming, safe space. Come with your questions and an open heart. You don't need to have all the answers or be ready to make any decisions. Sometimes the greatest gift we can give those we love is the peace of mind that comes from planning ahead.

"Yesteryear"
by Caro Claire Burke

Our November selection will take us in a very different direction! Yesteryear is a thought-provoking novel about a modern-day social media influencer who has built her identity around an idealized "traditional" way of life. It raises fascinating questions about faith, identity, gender roles, motherhood, social media, nostalgia, power, and the stories we tell ourselves about the "good old days."

- 1. What stayed with you?
- 2. Where did you see yourself?
- 3. Where might God be inviting you?

A note for readers: This is an adult novel and contains strong language and mature and potentially disturbing content, including depictions of domestic and child abuse, violence, sexual content, pregnancy-related trauma, and other difficult situations. It will not be the right book for every reader, and that is okay. I chose this book because it gives us plenty to wrestle with and discuss together. As always, come ready for good conversation, different perspectives, and the opportunity to listen to one another!
